200MW + 100MW Système italien de stockage d'énergie par batterie BESS

Cet investissement stratégique, d'une capacité substantielle de 200 MW d'électricité combinée à 100 MWh de stockage d'énergie, représente une avancée majeure dans la création d'un réseau électrique italien plus flexible, plus fiable et plus durable.

Stratégiquement située en Calabre, une région à fort potentiel de production d'énergie renouvelable, cette installation BESS est conçue pour être un élément essentiel de l'infrastructure énergétique nationale. En stockant l'énergie excédentaire générée par des sources intermittentes telles que le soleil et le vent, le système améliorera la stabilité du réseau, gèrera les périodes de pointe et permettra une meilleure intégration des énergies propres dans le réseau.
